Comment:

It can be said and agreed that better results have been expected from him. He made some good progress such as the first part of the second league where he played a score of 11:4, however he fails to impress on national and international level. Compare to the environment and the people he works with he has not been able improve his results. The reasons are analyzed and we all hope that he will turn his results better in the near future.

Comment:

It is all good and decent because he is disciplined, has a good work ethic, there isn't any problem with him. But that is also his down part not being able to offer any special signs of excellence and real deep fighting spirit and change. Maybe this is his mental limit, this will be seen in the next season. One thing is sure: he needs a change, he needs something more from himself to break the chain and to put things on the next level.

Comment:

He has been doing his daily physical programme alone and very disciplined. He has a stable base to build on and the next step will be to find some real time for a longer fitness block to be able to improve his power and speed. This is a question of time but unfortunately because of the Youth European Championships, this summer might not offer this required opportunity.

Comment:

This analyse shows yet again where he stands currently. There is no need to go deeper in all the specific areas because overall, he has all the skills and technical base to get better, there are no big holes in his game. The issue is that he is an analytic person who searches problems where there are no problems. Therefore the goal is to direct his focus in the practice from a technical approach to a mental approach concerning his table tennis. His level of technique isn't a problem, his approach to his technique is the problem.

Comment:

We can say that, he is the best off the table from all the boys, and this taking his age into account, is a significant thing. However, we would change it to a less organised person to a more successful player in his table tennis. On the other hand, we believe that he can develop other sport skills beside his very strong base off the table because it is really impressive how he handle his school, his room, his travels and all by himself, alone.

Comment:

He MUST do better! We believe also that he CAN do better, as well. Next season is a decisive one for him in terms of where his career will head. He got a chance from Donic and LMC to continue with the work in Ochsenhausen, however, next season improvement regarding his mental side and results wise, is expected from him. We are eager to see how he faces this challenge and whether he is able to leave his comfort zone and to develop his personality!
